SUBJECT: A Change for all of us

We all had to adapt our work and personal life because of the global pandemic. We had to stop seeing significant others, self isolated to help contain the spread, and had to wear masks in public just to name a few. It was a tough period for all of us but thankfully we as a society are moving beyond such restrictions. We are now at the precipice of change by redefining what it means to work an office job. With how well you all did during the pandemic, I personally see the merit of having everyone stay home and work.

I understand we all need different environments to thrive. So instead of forcing everyone to come back to the office, I offer a hybrid workspace. We will keep using zoom for our meetings but offer people to come in person to help us better communicate with each other. And with the same line of logic, we will also have pitches only in person. This means if you find working outside of the office space for your day to day tasks maximizes your productivity, you absolutely can do that. But for those of you that are not able to be productive at home, I will give you a second chance by working at the office to see if that will help your situation. This is first for all of us and ,if we stick with it, prove that we can have the best of both worlds.
